stated that hens have been known to lay two eggs in one day, but always had our doubts about it. Mr. Lawrence B. White, of Caroline, informs us that a hen on his premises actually did lay two large, round and perfectly formed eggs to one day, and both at the same time. What seems still more wonderful is, the two eggs were united at each and by a small soft tube or membrane, which adhered so closely to them that one might hang the eggs across his finger like a pair of saddle bags, and dangle them about, without their separating. Incredible as this egg story may seem, it is, never-theless, a fact. This hen is of the common breed of fowls, with nothing remarkable about her, any more than it must be admitted by all that she has distinguished herself by this uncommon mode of laying. - Fred, Herald. True merit, says the Marquis of Halifax; is FANCY GOODS.
